Webbon praises seminar's 'high level of interest'

Published: 12/11/2004 (Sport)

PETER WEBBON, the Jockey Club's director of veterinary science and welfare, who chaired the Cheltenham seminar, described the event as 'the largest, truly representative group ever drawn together by an interest in horse welfare'.

He said: 'I can't imagine that any seminar of this kind has drawn people from so many sides, from owners and trainers and breeders and veterinarians, and from feed merchants to Government departments.'

He added: 'I was a little worried beforehand that we might not have got the mix right, but it has turned out to be an excellent day, with questions from all parts of the equine world that indicated a high level of interest.'

The seminar was hosted by Cheltenham racecourse in association with the Levy Board, and sponsored by Intervet and Dodson & Horrell.
